THE LEADING CITY.

Chamberlin Visits Albuquerque and Gives His Views.

HE WRITES AN INTERESTING LETTER

The territory of New Mexico is of great extent when compared with our New England states. It extends from Colorado on the north to the Mexican Gulf on the south, and from the Rocky Mountains on the west to the Gulf of Mexico on the east. The population consists mostly of Mexicans, and the population consists mostly of Mexicans.

To those afflicted with lung and throat diseases, New Mexico offers very favorable climatic conditions. Dry, acetic air, light atmospheric pressure, a minimum of moisture and maximum of sunshine, the soil of a porous nature and the variations of temperature slight. There is very little rainfall during the year, eight months in the atmosphere, and fog is scarce on the Santa Fe Pacific.

Albuquerque is the leading city and commercial center of the southwest. It is located in the Rio Grande valley, on the main line of the Atchafalaya, Topoka & Santa Fe railway, at its northern terminus. The city is built on a broad plain, with high mountains on the east and south, at a distance of about 10 miles. It contains about 10,000 inhabitants, one-half or more being Mexicans.

The altitude of the city is 4,925 feet. Its location, near the center of the vast rainless districts and its remoteness from any large body of water, gives it an atmosphere almost totally devoid of moisture, and its altitude, latitude, and other favorable conditions cause it to have about the purest air in the world. It is very healthy, being up to the sun here without fear of becoming lained, but will be cured and preserved sound and sweet.

The city is divided into two sections or parts, the "old town" and the "new town." The old town was settled soon after the Spanish invasion of Mexico, or centuries ago. It has many ancient buildings among them the church of San Felipe, nearly as old as the town itself.

The inhabitants there are nearly all Mexicans, and their dwellings, places of business, etc., are all built of "adobe" brick made of a mixture of clay and straw dried in the sun. It is a very quiet old place to visit and is built near the banks of the Rio Grande river.

The new town had its beginning with the advent of the Atchafalaya, Topoka & Santa Fe railway, and was "staked out" in 1880. It is situated a mile and a half from the river and the old settlement, but is connected by a long street leading from one to the other, and by a street railway.

The new town is well built, with broad streets and many fine buildings, among them the Bank of the Territory, the Chamberlain's Cough Remedy building, the Commercial club building, the latter was erected a year or two ago at a cost of $100,000. It has many fine rooms, a large library, and a fine opera house.

One could write chapters about the fine scenery and points of interest here, but as I have already taken as much of that subject as I ought, will bring my letter to a close.
